ABSTRACT

[00112]   A method and apparatus for assembling software components into an application. In an embodiment, the apparatus generally relates to an application creator which assembles software modules at run time into a container application. The container application supports interface inheritance and implementation inheritance from an existing software component.

Atty. Docket No. 5315P002